

This is really strange. I was looking for more information on the ownership issue of the media. Maybe I can locate it yet; however, I will take this opportunity to express my view that TV news today is almost identical no matter which station you are viewing. I can only see it as even more commercial and with less diversity if companies are allowed to own a larger piece of the media. We fault other countries that have government controlled media, but we are considering letting conglomerates take over ours? I hope not!
